

POLITICS ON JOB TO BALK CONGRESS ACTION IN CRISIS

RAILROADS AND LABOR
READY FOR BATTLE ON LEGISLATION.

HARDING ANXIOUS

President Alarmed at Situation
Facing Country; Great Suffering Seen.

Gazette.

Washington.—Congress may not respond as rapidly to President Harding's request for legislation to prevent strikes and lockouts if the coal and rail situations are cleared up as would be the case if the crisis continues indefinitely.

Already railroad representatives, whose business it is to see that congress does nothing that can be harmful to their interests, are on the job. Labor, too, which successfully fought the resolution of an anti-strike provision in the present transportation act, is getting ready to wage another battle.

Anti-labor Act Unlikely.

With the autumn elections starting congress in the face, the prospect of legislation unfavorable to labor is far from likely. Congress back-tracked on the anti-strike provision once before because of a fear of voting power of railroad employees. The legislature of 1921, however, would be no better for the shopmen which would not apply equally to engineers, trainmen, conductors and all other classes of workmen on the railroads of the country.

Although the labor vote is a doubtful quantity, and politicians claim it never supports any one party with sufficient strength to change the result, a closer approximation of the

A crowd of Irish men and women assembled outside the jail at 7 a.m. an hour before the execution. They sang hymns and prayed for the souls of the condemned men.

FARM CREDITS ARE URGED BY MORGAN

Producers Must Not Fall Into Tenant Class, Asserts Attorney General.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] August—Wisconsin farmers must never be permitted to pass into the tenant class," declared William J. Morgan, attorney general, candidate for Governor, in speaking before the legislature on the subject of farm credits, to which the attorney general said all of his associates on the republican ticket are pledged for the campaign.

"We favor an amendment to the farm and mortgage association act to supplement the federal land bank system along similar lines under state supervision," Mr. Morgan said. "The federal land bank loans 50 per cent on the value of land and 20 percent on the value of improvements. The experience of that bank is that it has fewer losses in Wisconsin than in any other state," he said.

"Many Utilities Unable to Arrange for Coal; Are Out of Luck."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS] Milwaukee—Even though utilities have been placed on the preferred list for coal, those who have been unable to get coal under contract will not be supplied by priority orders for the present, C. D. Schaeffer, secretary of the railroad commission, today informed the Wisconsin Public Utilities bureau here.

Mr. Schaeffer says the utilities supplying gas, electric, heat, power and transportation services must have coal under contract or else priority orders will be of no value.

"The hub of the situation," he declared, "is to obtain the coal. Priority orders have no benefit unless the utilities have coal under contract. I am informed that a large number of companies have been unable to negotiate contracts because of the strike. Those utilities are 'out of luck' priority orders will not benefit them. They must first know where their coal is coming from before we can grant priority approval to the railroad companies."

Prepare Priority Orders.

"The railroad commission is now directly in charge of preparing priority orders for utilities in order to expedite shipments and take some of the load off the Wisconsin Fuel commission."

"The commission has sent questionnaires to all the utilities asking them for their stock on hand as of July 31, what supply is definitely assured them, weekly consumption at present time, estimated consumption for your starting August, and cost of their supply and shipping points."

"Unless the questionnaires are answered, utilities may lose the advantage of the priority to which they are entitled."

"The utilities need coal every day now or people will soon be without gas, electric and transportation services," Mr. Cadby said. "Questionnaires so far received show different conditions in various cities in the state. Some utilities have only a three or four day supply, others a week, while others have more coal supply."

"At Tomah and Park Falls the utilities are already burning wood to supply the people with their services. The shortage is fraught with dangerous possibilities."

Need Daily Coal.

John N. Cadby, secretary of the association, will help the commission in getting up returns to questionnaires from utilities.

"The utilities need coal every day now or people will soon be without gas, electric and transportation services," Mr. Cadby said. "Questionnaires so far received show different conditions in various cities in the state. Some utilities have only a three or four day supply, others a week, while others have more coal supply."

ILLINOIS VILLAGE CATHOLIC MECCA

Pilgrims Go to Shrine of St. Anne; Called "Lourdes of America."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

St. Anne, Ill.—This little village now host to several hundred Catholics from Illinois, Indiana and adjacent states, who have come here to pray to the shrine of St. Anne, may be called the "Lourdes of America." It has been made a special place of pilgrimage by the quiet pastoral community, its peaceful religious atmosphere is seldom disturbed by even a ripple of excitement, but once a year it becomes the hope and shelter of the lame, the sick and the distressed who with faith and prayer here seek consolation from their sorrows.

It is said that here as at Lourdes in France many come for healing and depart leaving their crutches.

Famous for Grotes.

The French city is famous for its grotto where the Virgin Mary is believed by Roman Catholics to have revealed her name repeatedly to a peasant named Bernadette Soubirous in 1858. A statue of the Virgin Mary stands on a rock projecting above the grotto. Here gather multitudes of pilgrims from all quarters of the world.

So here at St. Anne's, on the altar within the church, reposes a relic reported to be that of St. Anne. And annually for the last 18 years a novena or nine days' prayer is held. The ceremonies include sermons by Passionist missionaries and the days and evenings are taken up with long periods of devotion. On the ninth day the sacred relic is borne on the head of a procession which winds its way about the streets of the village, a long line of pilgrims following in solemn obsequies. The townspeople are hosts to the visitors. They take care of them throughout the novena.

French Traders Come. Like Lourdes, St. Anne's has its history. Before 1853, the territory all above here, including the city of Kankakee, was a wilderness inhabited by strolling tribes of Indians. Then venturous Frenchmen from lower Canada came and bartered with the Red-men bought land for a mere song, and on their return induced a number of their countrymen to come to the fertile valley of the Kankakee. The earliest of the pioneers settled in Bourbanais Grove, where the first Catholic mission was founded.

In the early fifties, Pere Chiny, a priest of Montreal, came to join the colony. He liked the country, returned to Montreal and induced a great number of settlers to come to this land of promise.

Pere Chiny founded the town of St. Anne. Chiny later succeeded from the church. St. Anne was the center of the French colony. Bourbanais near hear, with its 300 inhabitants, is today the typical French settlement. It has two Catholic institutions, St. Viateur College and St. Katherine's convent. Other towns founded at the same time are Monome, St. George, St. Marys, Manton, Pineapple, L'Arble, and largest of all Kankakee.

It was made reparation for this settling of Chiny's that the pilgrimage to the shrine was instituted, and it has continued through many years.

The French-Canadian accent is still plainly discernible in the speech of many of the people here.

TITLED BRITISH WOMAN TAKES UP BUSINESS CAREER

FOUR CANDIDATES HERE THIS WEEK

City to Hear McHenry, Morgan, Johnson and La Follette.

TRADE OF PINT OF WHISKEY FOR BOAT IS HELD ILLEGAL

While the prohibition law is in force, any traffic in whiskey is illegal, says Frederick J. Haskin of the Gazette's Information Bureau at Washington, D. C., in reply to a question made by a Gazette reader. The question arose over the trace of a boat for a pint of whiskey.

This is but one of many questions that Mr. Haskin answers weekly for Gazette readers.

The free service is taken advantage of to a great extent, and is proving to be a great aid in settling questions.

A boy was given copies of the constitution to aid him in the preparation for study of law, while another person was given information concerning building birdhouses.

Germany's violation of the principle of the freedom of the seas was one of the topics of the war, said Mr. Haskin in answering a question about the meaning of this phrase.

The same inquirer was told that the three-mile limit is an international agreement.

In addition to giving out answers to questions, Mr. Haskin issues many pamphlets on various topics.

Among them were the constitution, 12-cent 21¢ oranges, 6¢ canning, 3¢ drying, 1¢ modern homes, 5¢ rums, 2¢ mice, 4¢ hats, 1¢

Attorney General William J. Morgan, "The Trust Buster," will speak at the court house park at 8 p. m. Friday. Bills announcing at the fair grounds will be distributed but it was thought wiser to have Mr. Morgan speak down town.

With Mr. Morgan will be Henry S. W. evo Johnson, veteran state treasurer, running for re-election. Mr. Johnson is expected to make some interesting disclosures in regard to the income tax laws.

Senator Robert M. La Follette is expected to speak his record in the Senate and to tell why he should be re-elected, as he speaks at the rink here Saturday night. He spoke at Watertown and Fort Belvoir, Tuesday; Whitewater and Milwaukee, Wednesday; Racine, Thursday; and Delavan, Friday. Senator La Follette will also speak at Beloit, Saturday.

Attorney General Morgan shifts from the northern part of Wisconsin to Madison on Friday, when he will give addresses at Stoughton, Edgerton, Evansville and Janesville. Saturday he will speak at Broadhead, Beloit, Whitewater and Elkhorn. Martin L. Paulsen, candidate for secretary of state, speaks in this vicinity on Saturday at Burlington, Whitewater, Delavan and Elkhorn.

THE GAZETTE'S PLATFORM

Send every energy to finish the high school building so it may be used before the end of 1922. With the completion, the problem of the high school will be solved. Janesville needs another high school to accommodate the people here. This will be especially true when the high school is completed and the auditorium is available for other uses.

Finish the paving of Janesville streets as soon as there can be the necessary readjustments in taxation so as not to place a burden on the citizens. This will give the city a name. There is now available $10,000 for this purpose and it should not be used for any other. Finish the city and zoning laws.

Maintain buildings for World war soldiers, the dying and the dead—to be also an important building.

GETTING ALARMED ABOUT COAL

We are walking up about coal. We will be more widely awake about the first of November. The strike has been on for four months but it took a drop of 28 degrees in the temperature to send the head of the family to the cellar and discover that there were only a few shovels of fuel in the bin. There is no use of damning the government because it has been doing about what the individual is at now. The governor of Wisconsin leaps to the rescue and demands that the coal mines be seized. The time when that would have helped has passed. If the coal mines start up tomorrow there will be a coal shortage this winter. We might as well face the fact. We have lost three months of lake navigation, the season when coal is being piled on the lake docks against the cold weather. And if the mines are started within a few days, as it looks possible now, we will still be confronted by the rail strike and the impossibility of shipping fast enough to make the ordinary tonnage needed.

We might as well go to the bottom of the coal business and have a genuine settlement as to wait for another strike. And some of the principles involved are the same as in the railroad strike. The coal operators started out to fight the unions to the death. They have failed in that. The public has been crushed between the two opposing forces. Whatever settlement is made will be with the miners retaining the check-off system—the method of payment of union dues from the employer's office and a continuation of the unions. There would be no miners' union without this check-off system and it was the first skirmish of the 1922 conflict. Most of the labor at the mines is by men who have little conception of American institutions, are not skilled in the language, are not impressed individually with the obligation to the miners' union except as they know a sum has been withheld each day for union dues, therefore their first allegiance is to the miners' union and the republic of the United States is a secondary consideration. Add to this condition a great overproduction of coal from mines already in operation and those developed during the war to meet the emergency, and no way devised to regulate this production and we have some of the basic reasons for the stand of the operators and the miners, each for his position.

We will not settle the coal question until there is some definite regulation about production and it is here and here alone that the government may intervene and do something decidedly worth while. For the consumer the two elements figuring most in coal price are wages at the mines and freight costs. Regional distribution may lower the element of freight costs a little but wages are determined for all fields by the union practically on the same scale.

Seizing the coal mines, owning and operating them will add another burden to a government already loaded up with care and make us the victims of more political difficulties. Mining coal under the guns of guards is to get nowhere. We have been fiddling for four months while Rome was getting ready, not to burn, but to freeze.

With assurances of the financing of the tobacco pool the growers of Wisconsin can take a new place in the business of the world.

DRY IN OHIO

Some surprise is evidenced over the result of the primary election in Ohio. There has been no deviation from the path of regularity in the Buckeye state and as there was no radical issue and no smell of the Bolshevik in Ohio, the names of candidates are not of any great importance. The big outstanding fact is that the state has been carried by the candidates pledged to the program against light wines and beer. The booze candidates got nowhere. It was the big issue. The brewery interests and the other backers of the beer and wine campaign were left far behind. In this fight went the women with intense earnestness and the result is another evidence of what they can do in a campaign. Ohio has joined New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Indiana in supporting the prohibition laws.

The biggest and best fair ever, is said of most fairs—but the one now on at Janesville is its own proof of the truth of the statement.

WHAT ROBINSON SAID

Owing to a transposition of type, Wednesday's editorial on Senator Robinson, misquoted the Senator. What Mr. Robinson said follows:

"If the time ever comes," Senator Robinson added, "when the American people lose confidence in the press of the nation, if the time ever comes when the people regard the influence of the press as subject to purchase or sale, it is the beginning of the end of free speech and a free press."

THIRD PARTY TALK

BY FRANCIS J. HASKIN

Washington—A new political party is promised for the 1924 campaign. It will be known as the liberal party, according to the story that has reached Washington. It will present a national ticket and may put candidates into the field in states.

As yet the new movement lacks a leader and a financial angel, it is understood. It has proponents but no protagonist. Its machine is in the building, but the lubricating oil and fuel are not in sight. Also it may be said the prospectus does not set forth the big idea that is to vitalize the new movement.

History records the fact that if it is to attain formidable proportions, a new political party must be formed around a personality or an idea. Roosevelt and the progressive party and abolition and the republican party are examples. If the proposed liberal party can present neither a Roosevelt nor an outstanding issue it may afford nothing more than food for gossip.

However, the enthusiasts declare the movement will develop the requisite leadership and that it will present issues a plenty. For the present the important thing on the program is to foment discontent within the ranks of the republicans and democrats. This calls for propaganda which is already under way on a small scale and it is to be expected that there will be more of it as the weeks roll by.

It should be stated at the outset that the liberal party is in no wise to be confounded with the Henry Ford presidential movement. One of the missionaries of the new cause who came to Washington from New York a few days ago said so unqualifiedly.

Wading through the somewhat vague generalities of its advocates one finds that the new party is to be fundamentally a party of protest—a protest against the manner in which the two old major parties, the republican and democratic, are managed and a protest against the kind of administration either of them gives the country when it is in the ascendancy. There has always been more or less dissatisfaction with the two old parties. It is pointed out, and every man who goes into the White House invariably engenders hostility and criticisms that can be coined into political opposition.

Just now it is claimed there are serious dissensions within the ranks of both the democrats and the republicans. The former are divided into Wilson and anti-Wilson elements while the latter are segregated into administration and anti-administration camps. It is argued that while the state of Woodrow Wilson's health makes it impossible for him to become the field general of his party, the former president is asserting a kind of leadership that will foist discord to a degree that the democrats cannot hope for victory in 1924. As to the party in power it is contended that differences over patronage and legislation and the alienation of friends or the making of enemies by President Harding have created conditions such that it will be extremely difficult for the republicans to present anything like an united front in the next fight for the Presidency.

In the circumstances, say the liberals—if they may be so designated—it is only necessary to bring together the dissatisfied in the two old parties and unite them with the large independent element that there has been in the country since 1912 to have a new party that might sweep everything before it two years hence. Old line politicians are inclined to agree with this, but they say the one essential thing cannot be done.

"There are plenty of malcontents among the democrats and republicans," said one of these veterans in discussing the "new movement," and there are plenty of independents who are simply malcontents of another stripe. But you couldn't get them together and hold them long enough to run a campaign and go to the polls. You can't make an aggressive disciplined army out of dissenters and slackers."

Without doubt the third party movement has received no considerable impetus from the results of the primaries held thus far this year in several states. The nomination by Indiana republicans of Albert J. Beveridge over Senator Harry S. New, Gifford Pinchot's victory in Pennsylvania as against the republican organization forces, and the defeat of Senator Porter J. McCormick in North Dakota were conspicuous examples of what the advocates of the new movement think the revolt against political machines.

Incidentally, both Beveridge and Pinchot are considered as possible leaders of the liberals in 1924. Both are republicans, it is true, but both were progressives in 1912 and enjoyed the close friendship and confidence of Colonel Roosevelt. Neither of them has ever been identified with the "old guard" republican wing and the serious thinkers who are laying big plans for the campaign two years hence believe that either the Indiana or the Pennsylvania could be persuaded to enact the role of national standard bearer.

It is possible both Beveridge and Pinchot have presidential ambitions. In fact, it would be surprising if they had not. However, it is also possible and more probable that both of them have in mind the working out of their ambition within the party to which they now own allegiance rather than the building up of an entirely new party. They are known as shrewd politicians as well as statesmen or caipier. Therefore, for all his tremendous personal popularity, could not win with a third party in 1912.

Herbert Hoover, who might have headed a similar independent movement in 1920, is mentioned along with Beveridge and Pinchot as a possible leader of the liberals in the next struggle, as are La Follette of Wisconsin and former Senator Kenyon of Iowa. Hoover, however, is a member of President Harding's official family and some of his friends say he has no thought of entering the race in 1924, but is looking further ahead to the time when Mr. Harding will have had his renomination and re-election, if that can be encompassed.

Among the democrats William Randolph Hearst is pointed out as an independent possibility.

If the farmer-labor coalition should develop formidable strength at the polls this year it may prove an important factor in the projected new party.

But here is perhaps the choicest morsel of the gossip agent a third party—whichever the nominee for president may be, the candidate for vice-president will be a woman.

did not subordinate every other consideration to being about the political overthrow of the men of the Republican party responsible for the refusal to place wood pulp and news print paper on the free list."

Mr. Bryan has had his hair cut. This is both an historical fact to be duly chronicled by some Bantam and also an incentive to read the story of Samson.

The senior senator said at Watertown, that the rich men had bought up all the newspapers in Wisconsin. Well there is one we do know of and that is owned by a millionaire who lives in New York. His name is Hearst. Most of the others are owned by men who started like Bill Nye's rich man, with one suspender, and by saying, hard work and rigid adherence to the tenets of old fashioned honesty, have won a place so that the pay roll while still a nightmare is without the teeth and claws it used to have.

The man who ate a bucket of crawfish will take his place in the hall of fame along with the consumer of 137 eggs.

THE VERY GOODLY MAN

I know a man, a goodly man, a Godly man is he; On Sabbath days he reads the Book to wife and children three.

On Wednesday eve he leads in prayer and asks the Lord above to lead him in the path of right and in the ways of love.

But, strange to say, this goodly man who prays for love and grace, Sheds little mirth around his hearth, but wears a solemn face,

He finds much fault with this or that, and if his wife should plead For silver for a gingham dress, he would not grant her need.

Often times when up his children come to beg for coins to buy.

The sweets displayed in store and shop, in anger he'll reply: "Think you that money grows on trees or I am made of gold?"

Run off and when the widow dens whose joys are bought and sold."

This goodly man prays night by night and asks the Lord to give Uncounted blessings unto him that he in peace may live.

Yet when his wife and children three ask some words of him: "He keeps his money in his purse and spurns their slightest whim."

He does not cheat, he does not steal, he does not tell a lie;

He is, indeed, a goodly man, which no one can deny.

He reads the Book on Sabbath days—yet such a churl is he,

I should not like to be his wife or of his children three.

THE REEL HERO

Hi links thought had negotiate the shortest cut to fame, And so he entered, modestly, the motion picture game. He was a reckless devil who'd try anything just once.

And he was tickled silly when they set him down in "The Devil's Trap."

Mcabubby, all the high-priced stars and did their falls and jummys.

The actors got the salaries and Hiram got the bumps.

A picture called for some one who was not afraid to fly.

The star backed up completely and they substituted Hi.

The airplane went bi-oh, when 'twas up a half a mile.

And Hi came back to Mother Earth and landed in a pail of water.

Director yelled: "That's simply great. Just hold that pose, I beg."

The picture broke all records and our Hiram broke a leg.

They put him on a Mustang that the hero would not ride.

Hi was content. He knew it didn't matter how he died.

The causee kicked him 'round awhile, and, with a final push,

Hi landed in nine rods away behind a cactus bush.

The picture was a triumph and the big star got a raise.

And Hiram got a broken nose—he'll carry all his days.

They dragged Hi through the salty sea behind a submarine.

The hero rode along the shore, snug in his limousine.

They threw Hi from express trains going at 100 miles an hour.

And had him gnawed by wildcats of a very vicious breed.

These acts of horsemanship made the public love the star.

Who's Who Today

CHARLES CADWELL MOORE

California is aroused just now at the possibility of Hiram Johnson being displaced as United States Senator by Charles C. Moore, Republican, of San Francisco.

It is expected that the race will be closely contested as Moore is one of California's best known men. Moore distinguished himself as chairman of the financial committee and later as president of the Panama Pacific International Exposition and is credited with much of its success.

Moore was born in Alpine, Schuyler County, New York, in 1868. He received his early education and college training in California and was a member of the San Francisco Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Specializing in motive power and hydraulic work, of which he is president. He is director of various financial enterprises in California.

He was appointed commander to Europe to secure foreign warships for the Portola celebration in San Francisco. He has been active on various civic campaign committees and on Liberty Loan committees and the State Council of Defense. He holds orders or decorations from China, Japan, Italy, Norway, and Greece. He is also president of the San Francisco Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

The Cross-Cut

A Serial Story of the Colorado Mines

By Courtney Ryley Cooper.

Copyright by Little, Brown & Co.

SYNOPSIS
At Thornton Fairchild's death his son Robert learns there has been a dark period in his father's life which for almost 20 years had caused him suffering. The secret is revealed in a note left by the elder Fairchild, which also informs Robert he is now owner of a mining claim in Colorado, and advising him to see Hadji, who is known to be a bandit.

CHAPTER II.—Hadji tells Robert his claim, a silver mine, is at Hadji, thirty-eight miles from Denver. He also warns him against a certain man, "Squint" Rodina, his father's enemy. Robert decides to go to Hadji. CHAPTER III.

On the road to Hadji from Denver Fairchild assists a girl, apparently in a frenzied state, who has run away from her home. When she has left the sheriff and a posse appear, in pursuit of a bandit. Fairchild, bewildered, misleads them to the direction the girl had taken.

"But—" "Don't ask my advice, boy. I haven't any. Your father told me what to do if you decided to try your luck—and silver's at $1.29. It means a lot of money for anybody who can produce pay ore—unless what he said about the mine panning out was true."

Again the thrill of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until 12 hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of steady, slow accounts, of high dues to pay as yet had failed to strip his shoulders, or stony offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recoil had not yet exerted itself against an office-cramped brain, a dusty ledger-life that suddenly felt itself crying out for the free, open country, without hardly knowing what the term meant. Old Beani caught the light in the eyes, the quick contraction of the hands, and smiled.

"You don't need to tell me, son," he said slowly. "I can see the symptoms. You've got the fever—you're going to work that mine. Perhaps," and he shrugged his shoulders, "it's just as well. But there are certain things to remember."

"Hadji is 38 miles from Denver. That's your goal. Out there, they'll tell you how the mine caved in, and how Thornton Fairchild, who had worked it, together with his two men, Harry Harkins, a Cornishman, and 'Sissie' Larsen, Swede, left town late one night for Cripple Creek—and that they never came back. Agree with it. Tell them that Harkins, as far as you know, went back to Cornwall, and that you have heard vaguely that Larsen had followed the mining game farther out west."

"It is the truth?"

"How do I know? It's good enough—people shouldn't ask questions. Tell nothing more than that. And be careful of your friends. There is one man whose name he is still alive. They call him 'Squint' Rodina, and he may or may not still be there. I don't know—I'm only sure of the fact that your father hated him. The mine tunnel is two miles up Kentucky gulch and one hundred yards to the right. A surveyor can lead you to the very spot. It's been abandoned now for 30 years. You'll find there is more than I can guess. But, boy," and his hand clenched tight on Robert Fairchild's shoulder, "whatever he is, whatever he does, run in, and whatever friend or enemy you find awaiting you, don't let that light die out of your eyes and don't pull in that chin! If you find a fight on your hands, whether it's man, beast or nature, sail into it! If you run into things that cut you very hard out to learn—beat 'em down and keep going! And win! There—that's all the advice I know. Meet me at the 11:10 for Minnehaoma. Goodby!"

"Goodby—" "I'll be there." Fairchild clasped the pudgy hand and left the office. For a moment afterward, old Henry Harkins stood looking out, looking out over the dim roof above. Then, somewhat absentmindedly, he pressed the ancient electric button for his most ancient stenographer. "Call a messenger, please," he ordered when she entered. "I want to send a cablegram."

Three weeks later Robert Fairchild sat in the smoking compartment of the Overland Limited, looking at the Rocky mountains in the distance. In his pocket were a few hundred dollars; in the bank in Indianapolis a few thousand, representing the final proceeds of the sale of everything that had connected him with a rather dreary past. Out before him—

Three weeks had created a metamorphosis of what had been a plodding, matter-of-fact men with dreams which did not extend beyond his ledger and his gloomy home, but now a man leaning his head against the window of an aching train, staring ahead toward the Rockies and the rainbow they held for him. Back to the place where his father had gone with dreams as low as the son traveling now—back into the rumpled mountains where the blue haze hung low and protecting as though over mysteries and treasures which awaited one man and one alone. It thrilled Fairchild, it caused his heart to tug and pull—nor could he tell exactly why.

The hills came closer. Still closer then, when it seemed that the train must plunge straight into them, they drew away again, as though through some optical illusion, and blooded in

"THAT CERTAINLY WAS WHITE OF CASEY TO TIP ME OFF—HE'S A REAL SPORT!!!"

"Here's How!!"

"The ticket seller smiled. 'You can't get one.'"

"But the map shows that a railroad runs here."

"I said there, you mean," chaffed the ciekt. "The best you can do is to get to Forks Creek and walk the rest of the way. That's a narrow-gauge line, and Clear creek's been on a rampage. It took about two hundred feet of trestle, and there won't be a train into Ochad for a week. Stranger out here."

"Very much of one."

"In a hurry, to get to Ochad?"

"Eyes."

"Then you can go up town and hire a taxi. They got big cars for mountain roads and there are good roads all the way. It'll cost you fifteen or twenty dollars. Or—"

Fairchild smiled. "Give me the other system if you've got one. I'm not terribly long on cash—for taxes."

"Certainly. No use spending that money if you've got a little pen, and it isn't a matter of life or death. Go up to the Central loop—anybody can direct you—and catch a streetcar for Golden. That eats up the time. Leaves just 2½ miles apart. Then ask somebody to point out the road over Mount Lookout. Machines go along there every few minutes—no trouble to stop to catch a ride. You'll be in Ochad in no time."

Fairchild obeyed the instructions, and in the baggage room rechecked his trunk to follow him, lighting his traveling bag at the same time until it carried only necessities. A luncheon, then the street car. Three-quarters of an hour later he began the five-mile trudge up the broad, smooth, carefully groomed automobile highway which masters Mount Lookout, making sound banisters. And then he stopped to one side. A grumpy truck driver leaned out to shout as he passed:

"Want a lift? Hop on! Can't stop—too much grade."

Outs started unchanged to the lower, with Sept. $1.05@1.05, and held near to the lowest figures yet this season, but then recovered a little in line with wheat. After opening much higher, corn moved down to about Wednesday's finish.

Needs of rails over a wide district led to a further, and so too did enlarged demand. The close was firm, $1.05@1.05.

Provisions were firmer with hogs.

WAR BOATS NOW AIDING SCIENCE

Cure Mine Sweepers Into Vessels for Sounding Alaskan Waters

Philadelphia—Two former mine sweepers, turning from the pursuits of war to those of peace and science, are being remodeled in Delaware river shipyards and are ready to weigh anchor to start on an indefinitely long cruise in the Pacific ocean for the U. S. coast and geodetic survey.

They are the steamers Pioneer and Discoverer, formerly the Auk and the Osprey, which saw service in the North sea. They are equipped with the finest scientific instruments for sounding and surveying.

They are to proceed to Alaska to sound and survey uncharted territory.

Contrary to general belief, it was said, there still remains much uncharted territory in that region. Many places show channels incorrectly charted and sounded. Also some places once correctly surveyed and sounded have been altered by constant action of waves.

The coast and the geodetic survey has taken over also a third mine sweeper, the Flamingo, from the navy department, now lying at Portsmouth, N. H., enlisting a crew. Following alterations, she probably will join her sister ships in Alaskan waters.

CLARK GIRL WINS HOLSTEIN TITLES CALF CLUB HONORS GO OUT OF COUNTY

Great Showing in Junior Contests at Stock Exposition.

Richland Center Lives to Stock Breeders Win Grand Championships.

Championships were decided in the remarkable junior contests at the Janesville fair Wednesday, when blue ribbons were awarded the boys and girls in this record-breaking exhibit. The junior contest proved the main attraction of the stock exhibit, for when the judging was staged the pavilion was packed and high interest in the contests.

Excitement among the juries was at high pitch when they led their animals into the show ring, or to the pens, to be inspected by the critical judges. It was an eventful day in the lives of the boys and girls.

Winners in the club contests have been entered for the state fair in Milwaukee.

Girls Are Winners

Little Edith Clark, 10, daughter of Russell Clark, Janesville, route four, again won the Holstein calf prize and the Gazette sweepstakes honor. She made a grand sweep with her prize as trophy a heifer as could be found. But it was not the animal that made the Clark girl stand out as a winner.

This girl is a wonder when it comes to showing a calf. She has ability that was not much in evidence even among the experienced adult breeders. She knew how to make her calf stand in the ring and show it to the best advantage. She took no time posting the animal on its feet. Was trained to stand like a statue. As a result she was applauded for her show ring ability and complimented by Judge Moserip.

Zick Girl Wins

Second honors went to Mildred Zick, route 30, Beloit, daughter of Theodore Zick. She had a splendid animal, large and well rounded-out but with one serious fault—drooping shoulders. The showing of the Zick girl is remarkable. Although but 10 years old, she is housebroken, said four years ago. With the seriousness in the world she led her entry into the ring. And for a time it looked like a back number. Mr. Moserip paid little attention to her entry for some time, carefully placing and replacing others.

Then he stopped short on seeing the calf held by the Zick girl, and after a brief inspection waved her to second position, where she stayed during the contests.

The Club Winners

The bull calves were judged first in the Holstein contests on the fair stage money. The winners in this contest were as follows: Lewis Nelson, Donald Carlson, Floyd Klingberg, Joseph Radko, Harry Longzen, and Donald Davis, in the order named.

The boifer contest was staged next and the order of placing follows:

Edith Clark, Mildred Zick, Mildred Reid, Alice Clark, Kenneth and Britton Holmbeck.

The six best of each class were put into the ring together for the sweepstakes honors and the 10 prizes of the Holstein association members, a total of 12 of the best calves.

After a sensible inspection the prizes were awarded as follows:

Mildred Zick—Beloit, R. 20.

Lewis Nelson—Clinton, R. 34.

Mildred Reid—Janesville, R. 2.

Alice Clark—Janesville, R. 4.

Kenneth Holmbeck—Beloit, R. 21.

Donald Carlson—Beloit, R. 21.

Helen Wehinger—Janesville, R. 6.

Floyd Klingberg—Beloit, R. 23.

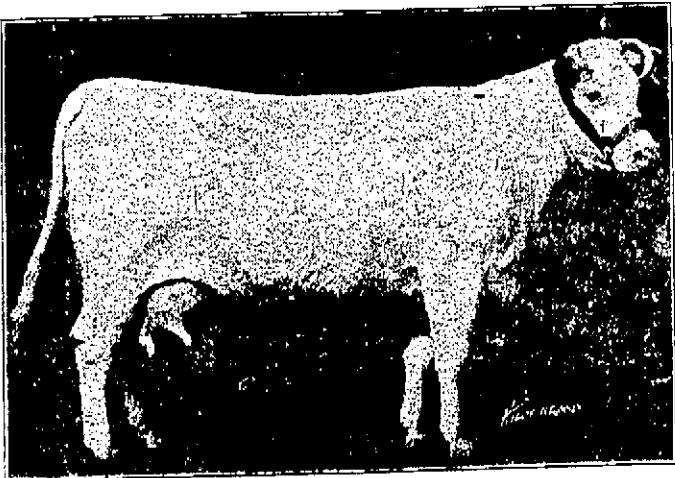

The spectators cheered the young stars as the prize winners were lined up for final selections. They deserved it.

"These boys and girls did their level best, and from a point of faithfulness all deserve from places," declared J. A. Craig, "Many of them were under handicaps."

Judge Moserip took time in lecture to the contestants and spectators, first complimenting the country on the Holstein calf club.

"Show ring judging is nothing more

HADDEN BULL WINS SHORTHORN RIBBON

Remarkable Showing of Dual Purpose and Beef Animals.

Further honors in Rock county's premier Shorthorns were added during the record breaking display of the dual purpose animals in the fair judging contests Wednesday. Few times have such contests been staged in Rock county.

Telluric's Fame, a well built red bull, Wisconsin grand champion last year, won the competition in the beef class for Hadden and son after a bitter contest. The mammoth White bull of the Margart brothers, Walgreen Duke, was winner in the beef class and fourth in the ring, all good sires. Judge C. M. Herg was some time musing his choice between Telluric's Fame and Walgreen Duke, but finally put the royal purple ribbon on the Hadden entry.

Howard Miller with an Ollie bull was the junior yearling ribbon and Park brothers won the ribbons for both two years and under three, with 12 entries—H. A. Bruce, John L. Fisher, A. C.
